ABSTRACT

This paper aims to ascertain and prioritise the different districts of Rajasthan state of India with their funding needs. In this paper, an attempt is also made to rank the different districts based on their need. The factors that are included in ranking contain the size of the district, the population of the district and the reproductive and child health indicators consisting of 10 different parameters. The paper will help in creating priorities and also bringing into fore the districts which actually need funds for development. The study is based on data from different governmental websites ranks them in the form of priorities and creates and map for future spending of governmental funds. A methodical formula has been used to give different weight ages for parameters according to the increase or decrease in spending. The paper will help in future policy making and spending of public funds.

KEYWORDS: Governmental funds, District prioritising, Development, Rajasthan.
